1. The 1 Marine Infantry Battalion which is stationed on the island of Solta is quartered on the heights of Pelegrin. These heights are one of the component parts of the Vela Straza fortifications. Vela Straza is the dominating height of the entire western part of the island.
2. The following military projects were constructed on the heights of Pelegrin in 1950:
  - a. A small building to house the battalion headquarters. It contains several apartments for officers.
  - b. A large two-story building, 30 meters long. It is used as a barracks to quarter troops.
  - c. A small building in which there is a kitchen for non-commissioned officers and troops, a mess hall, and a food depot.
  - d. A small building used for storage and quartering guards. This and the other buildings are made of cement, have a red tile roof, and are well camouflaged.
3. A road for carts, approximately 7 kilometers long, was completed in 1950. The road leads from the above buildings through the village of Grohote to the inlet of Rogac, where there is a wharf and a warehouse containing various materials.
4. The strength of the 1 Marine Battalion is approximately 350 men, the majority of whom are from Serbia or Macedonia. The Battalion is commanded by a certain Captain Zegarac. The unit is armed with rifles of Yugoslav manufacture, light machine guns of the Soviet model, a standard type heavy machine gun, and from six to seven cannons mounted on rubber wheels. Two posts on which radio antennae have been observed are located in the vicinity of the barracks.
